

GRAND PRIX RANGE

Originally introduced in 1966, the single seater Grand Prix retains the octagonal nose first seen on the Watsonian Sports sidecar of 1930, giving it a timeless appearance. Standard body colour is black or white, with many other finishes available. The body is made from glass fibre, with a polished gelcoat finish. Traditional polished aluminium beading is fitted on the nose, plus cast luggage rails on the boot lid.

The standard Grand Prix has a hinged, locking boot lid, upholstered bucket seat and cast aluminium footplate. The chassis is made from 1.5" tubular steel; all joints are welded for strength and it is powder coated for durability. Swinging arm suspension is fitted, with a rising rate spring and hydraulic damping, for a smooth ride. A tonneau cover is supplied as standard. Two other versions are available - the wide bodied GP700 and sporty GP Manx (see over).

The GP Manx has a shortened chassis, making it lighter and more compact than the Grand Prix. Ideal for a sporting combination or smaller capacity motorcycle/scooter, tilt the seat forward for access to the boot. A tonneau cover is included and a hood is available as an optional extra on all Grand Prix models.

The GP700 is the wide bodied version of the GP sidecar (overall width 40"). It seats an adult and child or two children, while retaining the classic looks of the other GP models. Its bench seat is 700mm (27.5") wide at hip height. This sidecar is suitable for compatible motorcycles over 500cc.

All Grand Prix models are available with either the DL 10" alloy wheel or the Jubilee 16" rim with stainless steel spokes and machined aluminium Watsonian hub.
